Jeff Rogers Crowned Inaugural Last Story Standing™ National Champion

Denver, CO — The National Speakers Association (NSA) is thrilled to announce Jeff Rogers as the National Champion of the inaugural Last Story Standing™ storytelling competition.

NSA's storytelling competition showcased the incredible talent within the NSA community, captivating audiences and participants alike across the nation. There were 25 participating chapters, and over 260 contestants.

The thrilling finale of the Last Story Standing™ was live at NSA's annual Influence conference on Tuesday, August 6. The three Regional Champions — Jeff Rogers, Trent Theroux, and Michelle McCullough, CSP — competed live on the mainstage.

These outstanding storytellers delivered powerful and compelling narratives, which the Influence attendees enjoyed. Following the competition, Jeff Rogers was awarded the honor of being the first-ever Last Story Standing™ National Champion.

The Last Story Standing™ competition is set to become a cornerstone event within NSA, offering members an unparalleled platform to hone their storytelling skills and connect with audiences nationwide. We extend our heartfelt congratulations to all participants, and especially to Jeff Rogers, for his well-deserved victory.
